RENTAL AGREEMENTS

Many breweries have often rent their facilities for use by the public, including birthday parties, work events, reunions, etc. While these are typically good sources of revenue and are also a good public relations tool, they do present additional liability exposures to the brewery.

For breweries that lease their facilities to others, we recommend the use of a contract which details the terms and conditions of the rental and also provides that the lessee/rental party will hold the brewery harmless in the event of injury or other damages related to the use of the premises. When reviewing Rental Agreements, many contracts are not appropriately worded with needed protection or are incorrectly completed, often with provided spaces left blank. This document offers risk management guidelines to assist your organization in reducing your liability exposure. A sample rental contract is included with a hold harmless agreement that may be used in whole or as an example for your organization. Whether you use the sample agreement or develop your own, you should have it reviewed by an attorney. If you choose to create your own form, consider including the following points:

- Make certain that you have all of the parties who are actually responsible for the event listed and obtain a signature.
- Define exactly what is being rented including any room(s), accessories, utilities, equipment, and related structures.
- Make certain you know exactly what type of event is going to take place and that it is described on the agreement in writing. For example, a party could be a children's birthday party, an adult birthday party or it could be a bachelor party. You will want to know what kind of activity they intend to have and what activities you will or will not allow. You should specify any activities that you do not wish to take place.
- Define when the event will begin and end, including set-up and clean up times.
- Require a certificate of insurance or a copy of their insurance policy showing the existence of liability insurance, even from individuals. They are free and should be easy to obtain by having the individual contact their insurance agent. (You may be surprised by the number of people and organizations that don't have liability insurance.)
- If you don't have insurance to cover events, you can purchase Event Coverage at TheEventHelper.com.
- Include any restrictions that you may have (e.g. no tape or thumb tacks on walls & ceilings; no outside alcohol, no illegal or immoral activities, etc...)
- List specifically the amount of deposit(s); when they are required; how & when they will or will not be returned.
- Define who will be responsible for any and all damages, and how they will be assessed.
- Have a hold harmless and indemnification clause included in the contract.
- List an emergency contact(s) from your organization on the contract.
- Include a statement explaining that your organization has the right to terminate the event or expel any person or persons for unruly, unsafe, illegal or dangerous behavior or who is in violation of any other clause of the contract.

Any forms/contracts should be reviewed by an attorney for compliance with local laws and suitability to the particular needs of the organization involved. Once developed, the contract should be used for all rentals, even if the brewery is being used gratis or by a member. A copy of the contract should be given to the lessee and the original kept on file.

This is a sample guideline furnished by WinStar Insurance Group. Your brewery should review it and make the necessary modifications to meet your organization's needs. The intent of this guideline is to assist you in reducing exposure to the risk of injury, harm, or damage to personnel, property, and the general public.
